

ABSTRACT

A system and method that allows videoconferencing-formatted data to be viewed with standard media formats for computer systems. A processor interprets the header information contained in a videoconferencing-formatted data stream and reassembles the audio and video data into a standard media format. Although new headers are created, audio and video data are unmodified for the new format.

2009/04/28/14:44